Chapter 1 by Nicole Nowak

And so, the prince discovered the beautiful princess in her tower and decided that the best plan of action was to try and wake her up. I'll give you a hint, it was not the best plan of action.

"Hey, wake up." He said, poking snow, "Wake up."

She turns away from him and groans "Five more minuets." She says groggily. He lean down to kiss her. She wakes up with a jolt

"What are you doing?"

"I was gonna kiss you to wake you up."

"How would that help?! Like, at all?"

"I don't know! You look really cute when you're sleeping."

"Ok, you're a creep and I don't even know you!"

"But like, I'm supposed to kiss you and we'll like, drive into the sunset or something."

"What do you think this is, a fairytale or something?"

"Well, yeah. We got a narrator and everything!"

Dude, don't drag me into this.

"Oh it wasn't that hard I just climbed the tower," He said smirking.

Her eyes widened in horror. Wait but what the heck the tower is like 300 feet tall.

"Well what did you expect, a grand rescue mission where I defeated the your mighty captor and carry you off. I couldn't exactly follow the fairy tale.

I mean what those princes did was actually pretty hard.

"I'm not even in captivity," She said in disbelief.

"Oh, I guess I came to the wrong castle," the prince said.

He climbed out the window, "Oh and what s this castle called," the prince asked.

"Get out," She screamed.

"Good to know, thanks he replied and he scaled down the wall with the ease of a spider.

Apparently, he was an assassin? She silently scolded herself. The prince was wearing princely attire, yes. But, it was a coat, with a hood that covered his entire face. He pulled it on just as he was leaving the tower.

"Either that, or he's got a modern flair for fashion," she sighed and leaned on the window sill dreamily.

You know, he wears a hood for when it's raining.

"I know, it's supposed to be reality, shut up."

Sorry.

You hired me anyway.

"Just be quiet."

"He knows there's a staircase right?"

He hasn't a clue. Snow chuckled, watching before stepping through a doorway and heading down a spiral staircase. She steps out of the tower, and waits for the Prince down below.

When he jumps the last few feet, he turns and bumps right into Snow. "What the?" he stares in surprise and Snow smirks.

"You might be able to climb a tower, but you're not that bright are you?"

"Seriously? I thought you said there wasn't a staircase?" Asked the Prince.

Oops, guess I forget to mention that.

The prince sighed in frustration before looking back at Snow, "Well, I've got another castle to get to then Princess." He said as he walks towards his horse.

Snow watches him climb onto his horse, and wonders for a moment what it'd be like to save someone. Maybe to find her true love by saving them.

"You can't just meet someone and say it's true love!" Snow shouted.

"Says you." the Prince remarked.

"Just shut up and ride off into the sunset Prince." Snow said as she watched him gallop away.

Snow decided to take a walk through her garden. As she was inspecting the lilies, she noticed a frog nearby.

"Hello, princess," the frog croaked. Snow wasn't unnerved by the talking animal, as she had her own talking mirror that she inherited.

"Why is everyone calling me a princess?" Snow asked the narrator.

Because you are one, you find out after - wait, I shouldn't be telling you this.

"We'll deal with this later, I'll be back in a minute." said the narrator.

The frog cut right to the chase. "You are very beautiful, and I am too. All I need is a kiss to prove it to you. Hey! That rhymed."

"Ew! Why would I ever kiss you?"

"So that I can be human again. I was cursed by..." The frog started.

Sorry Rodolfo, but Snow doesn't have time to listen to your tale right now. If you need a princess kiss, her 10-year-old sister lives just around that forest.

"Thank you!" Rodolfo the Prince-Frog hopped away.
